Helplines and local mental health services

November 2026

Tēnā koe

This resource is a directory of free national helplines, support services and regional mental health services in Aotearoa New Zealand.

At the back of this resource, you'll find blank pages where you can add your own local services and personal support networks.

For more information about suicide prevention and wellbeing or to access the Mental Health Foundation's free tools and resources visit mentalhealth.org.nz

Please reach out if you or someone else needs support. Help is available.

In a crisis or emergency

If you are worried about someone's immediate safety, stay with them and do the following:

If they are in immediate physical danger to themselves or others, call 111

OR

Call your local mental health crisis assessment team (numbers are on page 10-11 of this booklet) or go with them to the emergency department (ED) of your nearest hospital

Stay with them until support arrives, or until you arrive at the support service. Provide first aid as necessary.

If it's safe for you to do so, remove any obvious means of suicide they might use (e.g. rope, medication, guns, car keys, knives, poisons).

If they live in a high-rise building, help them find somewhere to stay in single-level accommodation.

Ask if there's someone else they'd like you to contact.

Stay calm, take some deep breaths. Let them know you care.

Keep them talking. Listen and ask questions without judgment.

Make sure you are safe.

More information and support

For more information and support, talk to your general practitioner (GP), medical centre, hauora, community mental health team, school counsellor or counselling service.

If you don't get the help you need the first time, keep trying.
